Women needed education to enable them to detect impurities in food, so that they may, not only be judicious purchasers, but that they may select genuine articles of foods as opposed to substitutes often harmful, through coloring matter employed to give these products an appearance to which in reality they are not entitled.

Injurious effects resulting from the use of adulterated foods were clearly explained by the speaker.

From the roster it is noted that the following officers were unanimously elected on October 19 for 1912-1913: president, Captain William Gordon McCabe: vice-president, Francis T. Antonic St. Antonic St.

The matter was agitated by Colonel Thomas W. Shelton, of Norfolk, who raised the point at the Chattanooga meeting in 1910. A formal resolution insisting upon reform was offered in Boston in 1911, approved by the committee on judicial administration and remedial procedure, and adopted in 1912. A com-

I believe they are right," said Gov-ernor Mann. "The very simplicity of the manner of doing it appeals to me. They want no costly commissions, and will not call upon the government or will not call upon the government of the public for a cent. The bar asso-ciation has appointed a committee of five of its well-known members to pre-sent the resolution to Congress and to request that the necessary statute be enacted at this session. That is all that will be required—the repealing of section 914, Revised Statutes, and all related laws, and giving authority to the Supreme Court of the United States. The court, with the uncompensated ser-

"Furthermore, it would mean a model system," said Governor Mann, "and as perfect as human agency could devise. The learning and ability of the Supreme Court justices would be aided by suggestions that would be solicited from the lawyers all over the United States exactly as is now being done in the reform of equity procedure. By this means, not only the big troubles, but the little ones that are known only to active practitioners, would be exposed and pro-vided against. Now, it is a fact that the lawyers have never been able to agree among themselves upon any one plan, and this has partly caused the delay, but they and the public would loyally follow the United States support any system created by the Supreme Court. By this act the law-yers did three things: They relieved themselves from further responsibility themselves from further responsibility in simplifying court procedure; they answered the criticism that lawyers did not wish pleading and procedure simplified, and they placed the responsibility upon Congress. It is, in my opinion, one of the greatest strides in the reform of judicial procedure since the creation of the Federal courts and it is most sincerely to be desired that the Governors of the States will co-operate with the American Bar Association and that they will be speco-operate with the American Bar Association and that they will be specially invited to do so. There is another thought: With the power in the Supreme Court to amend, as well as to create a system of judicial procedure, any unnecessary expense, hardships or delay worked by existing rules could be instantly corrected when attention was directed to the trouble. This can be done by a citizen. a lawyer or by the trial court. The value of this to the public is inestimable.
